INDICTED FOR PERJURY

Alleged Salvation Army Leaders

Languish in Jail at Somerset, Ky.

Somerset, Ky., July 16.—A man and a woman known as Moses Simpson and Mabel Stevens respectively, claiming to belong to the Salvation Army who have been conducting religious services on the streets for three weeks, are prisoners in the county jail. Since coming here they have been living as husband and wife. On Monday they were married in Monticello. When this was learned Chief of Police Fitzpatrick had them arrested and brought here. Simpson pleaded guilty to four counts and was fined $23 in each case. Last week he had a man indicted for flirting with his supposed wife, and on the witness stand both swore they were husband and wife. They have now been indicted for perjury and bond fixed at $250, which Simpson could not give.

"It was stated by the police that the woman had been receiving mail from Middletown, Ind., addressed to Mrs. T. M. Williams."

The same parties were in Columbia one week, beginning the third Monday in May, the opening of the Adair circuit court. They claimed they were doing a great work for the Lord in winning souls for their hire. They remained in their room until about midnight, then came out, sang and tried to preach upon the square, their main object being to collect money. At the start people contributed but before they left it was the general opinion that the town was infested with two rank frauds. Simpson claimed while here that he was married to the woman in Indiana five months before coming to Columbia.

What Industry Will Do.

Some years ago C. B. Walkup and H. C. Walkup, two colored men of this county, sons of Elizabeth Walkup, left the Flat Woods section of Adair for the West with the determination of bettering their condition. They were sober, honest, polite, with fair educations, but without money. They went to Illinois, and a short time after reaching that State they entered the real estate business and have been quite successful. They now live in Moline, Ill., where they have an office and are kept busy. At this time they are worth fifteen thousand dollars, clear of debt, and feel that they will continue to prosper. Other colored men in Adair county could profit if they would follow the pace set by the two Walkup boys.

They visit their mother, brothers and sisters every two years.

Lost.

A loose leaf vest pocket book. Will pay $1.00 for it.

A. D. Patteson

Rev. J. S. Chandler delivered a doctrinal discourse last Sunday. He did not say one word to offend those who differ with him. It was what might be termed an "educational sermon," and students of the Bible evidently gained much information, on the dividing line as to the mode of baptism.

Persons who have recently returned from Cumberland county, giving glowing descriptions of the corn crop. They say that corn in the bottoms and on the uplands never looked better at this season of the year. Old corn is now retailing at $3.50 per barrel while in Adair it is selling at $5.00.

Mr. Geo. R. Coffey has resigned as Marshal of the town of Columbia. The Board will make another appointment. The stock law can not be enforced without an officer, so that cows, hogs and other stock be kept off the streets.

The Commercial Hotel, Jamestown, was sold by the Master Commissioner the second Monday in this month. Mr. Vernon Holt became the purchaser, price $2,100. This is the house formerly known as the Holt Hotel.

Monticello will vote in November on the question of bonding the town to put in a light plant and water works system. The Outlook says the proposition will likely carry.

Evidently Columbia is one of the best watered towns in Kentucky. During the long dry spell we did not hear of a well or spring going dry.

Prof. R. B. Moss, of the Lindsey Wilson, will conduct the Institute at Paducah, beginning August 17.

Foot Sprained.

Miss Catherine Nell met with a very painful accident last Thursday night while attending a social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Walker. She was walking on the lawn, stepping upon an obstacle which creened her foot, spraining it very badly. It at once commenced to swell and the young lady had to be conveyed home in a buggy. It is hoped that there will be no serious complications, and that the patient will soon be able to leave her room.

The Darkey Wedding and ice Cream

Just after the Darkey Wedding at the Court-house, Aug. 10th, the High School girls will serve ice cream downstairs in the hallway. Don't forget the date, Aug. 10—first night of Institute week. You'll get hot laughing, but you can cool off before leaving.

Miss Mildred and Eva Walker and Miss Catherine Nell entertained a number of their young friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Walker, last Thursday evening. The accident which befell Miss Nell and the storm cut short the hours, but in the beginning a happy throng was together for an evening of pleasure.

Miss Clara Foley, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Foley, Humble, Russell county, died some days ago. She had just reached her maturity and was a very lovable young woman. She was a devout member of the United Brethren Church. Her death was a sad blow to her parents and other relatives and many friends.

It is estimated that the average wheat yield in the blue grass will be between 20 and 22 bushels. Occasional yields of from 30 to 40 bushels are reported, but in the main the figures are around 20 bushels. This is a considerable increase over former years. At the prevailing price this will not give the farmers a very big return on their acreage.

It now looks like the corn crop of Adair county has been saved. A soaking rain fell, which covered the country last Thursday night. Grass and other vegetation has also been greatly revived, and grazing for stock will come right along.

Presiding Elder W. F. Hogard will dedicate a new Methodist church at Sulphur Well, Metcalfe county, the fourth Sunday in this month which will be next Sunday. Evidently many will hear the discourse.

The property of Mrs. Mary Wilburn, deceased, will be sold at the home place on the 5th day of August.

Singing at Tabor next Sunday afternoon, conducted by Darnell and Hill.

Casey County Loses a Fine Woman.

Mrs. Alice Winfrey, who was the beloved wife of Mr. J. A. Winfrey, died on Damron's Creek, this county, last Saturday week. She was about forty years old, and was a lady highly respected, one who will be sadly missed, not only by her husband and children, but by the entire neighborhood. She was a devoted member of the Church, and while in health was active in church work. The deceased was a daughter of Thomas Bell, of Dunnville. Besides her husband she leaves seven children, Miss Linnie Winfrey, who attended Lindsey Wilson, last year, being one of the number. Her school mates will be sorry to learn that she has been bereft of her truest and dearest friend, as the place of mother can not be filled.

The funeral services were held last Sunday week, conducted by Eld. Z. T. Williams, of this place. In the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing relatives and friends. The interment was at Antioch Church, near Phil.

Fair Called off at Columbia.

The directors of the Columbia Fair Association announce that the Association will not hold a fair this year. They regret that conditions generally do not warrant its holding, and have merely met conditions, not made them. There'll be no shows on the ground until the roses bloom again.

Enjoyable Occasion.

Last Tuesday evening the members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church, entertained on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Russell. The evening proved to be a little threatening, and many who purposed to attend, failed to put in an appearance, but a sufficient number turned out to make a lively gathering—a highly enjoyable one.

During the evening the following gave a reading each: Miss Virginia Coffey, Mrs. Ray Montgomery, Miss Zella Pelley, Mrs. Jo Russell. These ladies are all talented and their renditions delighted the audience.

During the hours many of the latest records were run on a victrola, the music being highly appreciated. Refreshments were served.

Crop Report of Kentucky.

The Crop Report as of July 1st shows the general condition of growing crops to be greatly damaged by the lack of rain fall. The continued drouth throughout the State is said to be so serious that in some localities almost a total failure of oats, potatoes, grasses, etc., is reported. Gardens and pastures are suffering the most, in some localities being almost burned up for the need of rain.

Corn is reported to be withstanding the drouth better than any other of the growing crops. It has been well cultivated, and so far reports show the condition to be 81 per cent.

Much of the wheat has not been threshed, but where it has been the final yield is reported as an average of 17 bushels per acre for the State, and of a good quality. Oats also show an average of 17 bushels on the final yield, although in some sections they are reported as so poor they were not worth cutting. Rye is given as making an average of 14 bushels per acre. Much threshing has not been done yet.

Burley tobacco acreage is given at 70 per cent., while the condition is estimated to be 65 per cent. Dark tobacco shows an average in acreage of 61 per cent., while its condition is given at 67 per cent. Much of the tobacco was unable to be set owing to the drouth, and what was set is reported to be in only fair condition and badly needing rain. It must be remembered, however, that there is a possibility for a great outcome in the tobacco crop in case of a general rain within the next few days.

Live stock is beginning to show the scarcity of water, although the condition of horses is given at 92 per cent., cattle at 92 per cent., hogs at 89 per cent., and sheep at 91 per cent. Poultry is reported as doing well under the season conditions, chickens showing 91 per cent., turkeys 89 per cent., and ducks are given at 90 per cent.

The crop of small fruits was greatly curtailed on account of the drouth. The blackberry crop is reported to be very short, as berries are drying up on the vines. The present condition of apples is 70 per cent., that of peaches 75 per cent., while pears only show a condition of 65 per cent. Plums are given at 73 per cent., and grapes at 87 per cent. Garden conditions are estimated to be 59 per cent. Great complaint of the gardens is shown generally throughout the State, in many instances a total failure being reported. Potatoes are reported at 47 per cent., of an average year's condition. Alfalfa is reported at 78 per cent., while orchard grass is given at 74 per cent. Cowpeas show 72 per cent. also, while clover is estimated at 69 per cent.

In summing up the report it shows that there has been a deterioration all along the line in the last month of crop conditions. There is a possibility of a fairly good corn crop and tobacco crop in case of rain within a short time. Farmers are urged to continue the cultivation of corn, but let that cultivation be exceedingly shallow. The drouth is general over the State and several localities report there have been no showers since early in June, and some have not had any rain since the first of May.

Respectfully,

J. W. Newman,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

Has Your Child Worms?

Most children do. A Coated, Furred Tongue; Strong Breath, Stomach Pains, Circles under the Eyes; Pale, Sallow Complexion; Nervous, Fretful Grinding of teeth. We should at least give Rockefeller credit for the million dollar fund he has established for research work to aid suffering humanity. The government generally look after the welfare of hogs and other animals, so John probably thought he might as well be the goat and do something for us lambs.

Surprising Cure of Stomach Trouble

When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because that your doctor fails to give you relief. Mrs. G. Stengla, Plainfield, N. J., writes: "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklets came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all dealers and Paull Drug Co. Ad

Monkey Gets Drunk.

Here is a story from South Africa which is said to be a fact. According to a recent letter from the Congo region, the monkeys there are inordinately fond of a kind of beer made by the natives who use the beverage to capture their poor relations. Having placed quantities of beer where the monkeys can get at it, the natives wait until their victims are in various degrees of inebriation, and when they mingle with them the poor creatures are too much fuddled to recognize the difference between negro and ape. When a negro takes the hand of one of them to lead him off some other fond creature clings to the hand of the latter one, and another to his hand; thus a single negro may sometimes be seen carrying off a string of staggering monkeys. When secured, the beer is administered in decreasing quantities, so that they may only gradually awaken to the sad results of their spree.

Causes of Stomach Troubles.

Ledentary habits, lack of out door exercise, insufficient mastication of food, constipation, a torpid liver, worry and anxiety, overeating, partaking of food and drink, not suited to your age and occupation. Correct your habits and take Chamberlain's Tablets and you will soon be well again. For sale by all dealers and Paull Drug Co. Ad

The Best Medicine in the World

Making and Feeding of Silage.

Silage during the last three decades has come into general use throughout the United States especially in those regions where the dairy industry has reached its greatest development. Silage is universally recognized as a good and cheap feed for farm stock, and particularly so for cattle and sheep, are the observations made in Farmers' Bulletin 578.

Silage is the best and cheapest form in which a succulent feed can be provided for winter use, continues the bulletin. An acre of grain can be placed in the silo at a cost not exceeding that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding. Crops can be put in the silo during weather that cannot be used in making hay or curing fodder, which is an important consideration in some localities.

A given amount of corn in the form of silage will produce more milk than the same amount when shocked and dried. There is less waste in feeding fodder. Good silage properly fed is all consumed, an in addition very palatable. Like other succulent feeds it has a beneficial effect upon the digestive organs, and some stock can be kept on a given area of land when it is the basis of the ration.

On account of the smaller cost for labor, silage can be used for supplementing pastures more economically than can soiling crops, unless only a small amount of supplementary feed is required. Converting the corn crop into silage clears the land sooner than if the corn crop is shocked and husked, and because of these advantages silage, in the general opinion of dairy farmers has increased milk production per cow and has increased the profits per acre.

Hard on Pistol Toter.

The first conviction in Lincoln county under the new concealed weapons law, was had in the county court Monday, when Judge Bailey fined Clarence Reynolds $100 and gave him 30 days in jail for carrying a pistol concealed. He is also disfranchised for a period of two years, and cannot vote during that length of time. Reynolds was arrested at the picnic at Waynesburg Saturday by Sheriff Weatherford upon complaint that he was drunk and cursing in the presence of some ladies. When the officer started after him he fled, but ran right into the arms of Judge Bailey and Jailer DeBorde and was brought to town and lodged in jail. He pleaded guilty at his trial Monday. There is another old warrant against this young man, charging him with shooting on the highway, which the officials say they will enforce now that they have him.

Eldridge Alford, of the Green River section, was also convicted under the new pistol carrying act, being fined $50 given ten days in jail and disfranchised.

Walter Walls was fined $50 and given 25 days in jail for shooting at a camp meeting at New Salem.—Stanford Journal.

Sensible Sayings.

The best natured man down town is the man who has woman folks at home to grumble at.

Most women prefer poverty with the affection of her husband to riches without them.

Happiness is a perfume which one cannot shed over another without a few drops falling on ones self.

Kindness will go farther and bring us more happiness in this world than all the naughtiness and asperity we can possibly assume.

The man who expects to get to heaven on his wife's church membership, or the chickens he fed the preacher, is taking awful chances.

When you see a man who kisses his children in public, you may be well sure that he keeps their pantaloons well dusted at home.

To smile at the jest which plants a thorn in another's breast is to become a principal in the mischief.

Farm Poultry Items for July.

The old hens that have rendered good service, but now consume more feed than they pay for should be turned over to the markets.

Some men always have business away back out of sight when it comes time to clean the chicken house.

Nice to have a flutter keg, or barrel, lined with straw, in which to drop beheaded chickens, then you know where to find them and they will not bruise themselves.

When hens apparently healthy are found dead under the roost where they have fallen at night, the trouble is apoplexy, caused by too much fattening or stimulating food.

Treating fowls for lice will do little good unless poultry houses and coops are clean. The large gray louse found upon the head and neck of the fowls will cause weakness and symptoms resembling cholera.

It is well to include animal food in the ration for the growing chicks where large numbers are grown and the range is not large enough for them to find worms and bugs sufficient to satisfy their needs. Skim-milk refuse, meat from the butcher, or commercial beef scraps, are all growth stimulants.

Never feed young turkeys or chickens corn ground with the cob. If a case of indigestion appears, lessen the food. Watch the young turks, they will get too much cracked corn when you feed the chicks.

There can be no iron-clad rules in poultry raising. Our surroundings are so different, but there is one thing we all need, and most farmers can have, and that is plenty of range. The love of range is the first instinct with turkeys and chickens and other varieties of poultry will come nearer perfection in size and color when they have freedom.

Ducks will do better in small crowded quarters than any other fowl we have had experience with, if they are provided with proper foodstuffs; but how much happier they seem when they have the run of the farm. Say, we like to watch them catch bugs in the fields on a summer evening long about dark.

If the hens knew how to tell their wants they would demand shade these hot days. Fruit trees, hollyhocks, sunflowers, anything that will make shade, is a great source of comfort to poultry. They cannot stand full exposed to the hot sun right along, with no chance to run to shade. And if they could talk what would not our fowls say by way of thanks for placing their drinking water in the shade. Water that stands in the hot sun a few hours gets very warm as if it had been hot over a fire, then it is utterly unfit for chickens to drink.

Costs a little less to keep the flock when males are removed at the end of the hatching season. Roosters are not necessary for the production of eggs, and the eggs withstand the summer heat better, are more easily preserved and more desirable for storage. One poultry and egg dealer in Indianapolis buys from country people at this season and earlier, all their male birds, then in the late fall he sells back to them he paid them for their roosters in the early summer. In this way the farmer gets new blood and becomes educated to the fact that infertile eggs are the best for the market in summer. The bulk of the eggs come from the farm and the buyers demand better eggs. Fowls will have to be managed from the commercial standpoint.

A Gambler Prince

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

This is a true story. "Francols Blanc," said the judge, "what have you to say why sentence should not be passed upon you?"

"Nothing." "I regret that the inadequacy of the law compels me to let you off with a nominal punishment. You corrupted the young men in the telegraph office to publish false news from the Stock Exchange in Paris to enable you to make money by buying or selling shares, an offense which should give you not less than ten years in prison. I sentence you to serve seven months in jail, being the longest term I can give you for your crime."

Francols Blanc bowed his head and was marched away. When his term of service had passed he came out of jail with $20,000 to his credit in bank. Right under the nose of the judge who had convicted him he established a casino in Homburg, which was really a gambling house. He made money, but a prejudice against gambling was growing in Germany, and he feared the time would come when laws would be passed that would ruin his business.

M. Blanc looked up rather than down. He aspired to run his gambling business in a country where he could so influence the laws that none would be made to interfere with his method of enriching himself. So he looked about him. In Europe there are a number of small kingdoms, principalities, dukedoms, that have been independent so long that none of the great powers have the hardihood to absorb them. Blanc found a little principality containing a few square miles only that seemed ripe for what he intended. What the powers dare not absorb by the bayonet he resolved to absorb by undermining with gold.

The ruler of this principality had descended from one of the oldest royal families in Europe, but he had nothing but his pedigree. He held a court, it is true, but his courtiers were those who served without salaries and were able occasionally to lend the sovereign money. In order to recoup he sold a concession in his principality to two men, who bought it with the intention of opening a gambling house on the territory conceded. They built a casino and began operations, but the prince wanted all their profits, and they became discouraged.

Francols Blanc, learning of this concession and the condition of its owners, bought it from them and, closing out his casino at Homburg, built a costly one on the new site, laid out splendid gardens—in short, expended several millions with a view to making his place attractive. Fortunately for him the time was ripe for such an investment. For many years Baden, Baden, in Germany, had been the fashionable gambling center of Europe, where every one from royalty to commoner gave way to the passion of gaming. Baden Baden was now no longer such a resort, and Blanc aimed to make his concession what Baden Baden had been.

In this he succeeded. The gambling mania of Europe was all made to pour gold into Francols Blanc's pocket. Kings and queens, princes and princesses, dukes and duchesses, came and made it fashionable to be followed by every one who had a franc to spend and a franc to risk. The sovereign had all the money he wanted to spend, and his court, if not numerous, were at least well dressed and were not called upon to lend the prince money. But while he held the empty title of ruler of the principality Francols Blanc was the real governor.

The prince died and left his inheritance to his son. The new sovereign proved himself really nothing more than a silent junior partner in a gambling establishment, and there was nothing for him to do but remain as he was so he renewed the concession for a term of fifty years for $5,000,000, a sum that Francols Blanc could well afford to pay since he made it in a single year. He could afford to do more than this. He furnished all the money necessary to run the government, including official salaries.

One storm arose on the gambler sovereign's path, but he weathered it. The prince's neighbors, not relishing a gambling principality so near them, endeavored to induce one of the powers on which it bordered to take steps to prohibit it. In addition, the prince's subjects became dissatisfied at paying taxes to a prince who had such an enormous revenue. At Blanc's request the sovereign abolished all taxes, and Blanc paid them.

This was the last bite in the loaf the gambler devoured. The prince, the principality and lastly the subjects passed into his capacious maw. For when a citizen sells his citizenship the buyer becomes its owner.

Francols Blanc accumulated a fortune equal to some of the largest in America, and, if he was only a prince in a financial way, he married his daughters to princes.

The principality that forms the subject of this narrative lies on the north shore of the Mediterranean and is called Monaco. It is divided into three parts, one of which is Monte Carlo. It is on this portion that all Europe, persons from all parts of the world, assemble to "buck the tiger."

If the present Prince of Monaco derives an income from a concession to a gambler he is personally far above the gambling business. He is a scientist and has made some valuable contributions to scientific lore.

Urge upon him the importance of voting.

Let Adair county compliment Rollin Hurt by giving him a very large vote.

In speaking of a speech Mr. Rollin Hurt, Democratic candidate for a seat on the Appellate bench, recently made in Metcalfe county, The Edmonton News says: "Dealing with the issues of the campaign Mr. Hurt handled his subject in a straightforward, convincing manner interspersed with his inimitable humor that won the hearts of his hearers and produced a lasting impression. That the Democracy of Metcalfe will line up solidly for Mr. Hurt is evidenced by the words of commendation heard on every side, and where could be found a better man?"

Although no agreement exists a virtual armistice has been declared by all factions in Mexico. Provisional President Carbajal has announced that all cities near which rebel forces are concentrated will be evacuated by the Federals. The commission which is to discuss peace terms with Carranza has not reached him as yet.

Gen. Huerta's departure from Puerto Mexico may be delayed several days, due to the refusal of President Carbajal to sanction the use of Mexican gunboats for this purpose, and the failure of the former President to select a foreign warship for passage.

BALTIMORE CONVENTION RECORDS
ESTABLISH BECKHAM'S DECEITClaims He Voted For a Resolution Never Before National Convention

Official Records Show That the Part of the Bryan Resolution Against Which Beckham Says He Voted Was Withdrawn Before Main Portion Was Offered For a Vote

How Can He Now Explain His Vote For Ryan, Belmont and Wall Street?

Beckham's Self-Confessed "Confusion" at Baltimore Followed By Deliberate Misstatements To Voters of Kentucky

READ THE OFFICIAL RECORD

How did J. C. W. Beckham vote on the famous Bryan resolution in the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore on June 27, 1912?

This question has been the cause of some dispute between Mr. Beckham and Mr. Stanley since the beginning of the senatorial primary campaign. Mr. Beckham claims that he voted against the resolution at a time when he was laboring under a misapprehension as to its purport. Mr. Stanley states that no man could have misunderstood the purport of the resolution, and that it was impossible for Mr. Beckham or any other delegate to the convention to have had any other than a clear idea of the situation.

Any number of letters have been received at the Stanley headquarters asking for information on this subject, the latest of which is from Edyville, where Mr. Beckham said in his speech on Monday that he voted against the Bryan resolution before the second part of it had been withdrawn.

Prior to this Mr. Beckham has claimed that he was away from the convention during the debate and got in as the vote was about to be taken; that he was confused and misunderstood the situation. He has never before made the ridiculous statement that he voted against the Bryan resolution before the second part was withdrawn. The cold facts of the case are that the second part was withdrawn by Mr. Bryan himself before a vote of any sort was taken on the resolution.

Nobody in that convention ever had a chance to vote for the second part of that resolution, and the records of the convention will show it to anyone who wishes to look at them. Now, what did happen at the Baltimore convention on the night of June 27, 1912? Shortly after the convention gathered for the evening session Mr. Bryan introduced his resolution. Here is the resolution in full:

"Resolved, That in this crisis in our party's career and in our country's history this convention sends greeting to the people of the United States and assures them that the party of Jefferson and of Jackson is still the champion of popular government and equality before the law. As proof of our fidelity to the people, we hereby declare ourselves opposed to the nomination of any candidate for President who is the representative of or under obligation to J. Pierpont Morgan, Thomas F. Ryan, August Belmont or any other of the privilege-hunting and favor-seeking class."

"Be it further resolved, That we demand the withdrawal from this convention of any delegate or delegates constituting or representing the above-named interests."

Senator Ollie James, of Kentucky, was in the chair as permanent chairman of the convention, and upon the reading of the resolution by Mr. Bryan asked if there were objection to the adoption of the resolution. Thomas J. Spellacy, a delegate from Connecticut, objected. James V. Coleman, of California, sustained him. Mr. Bryan then said:

"Objection having been made to unanimous consent, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution at this time."

A. W. Gilchrist, of Florida, made the point of order that the State of Virginia had elected as one of its delegates to the convention a man named in the Bryan resolution—Thomas F. Ryan—and that the convention had no right to go behind that election. Senator James ruled that the convention could do anything it pleased under a suspension of the rules.

Emmett O'Neal, of Alabama, asked that the resolution be read again. Mr. Bryan himself reread the resolution amid a profound silence throughout the convention hall, and then spoke on it. Among other things he said:

Every Delegate Knew.

"There is not a delegate in this convention who does not know that an effort is being made right now to sell the Democratic party into bondage to the predatory interests of this nation. It is the most brazen, the most insolent, the most impudent attempt that has been made in the history of American politics to dominate a convention, stifle the honest sentiment of a people and make the nominee the bond-slave of the men who exploit the people of this country."

And again:

"I need not tell you that J. Pierpont Morgan, August Belmont and Thomas F. Ryan are three of the men who are controlling this country, who are as despotic in their rule of the business of the country and as merciless in their command of their slaves as any man in the country."

Then toward the close of his speech he made a proposition to the Virginia and New York delegations that if they would make a pool of their respective delegates, and a majority of the New York delegation did not ask for the withdrawal of Belmont, and the Virginia delegation did not ask for the withdrawal of Ryan, he would withdraw the second part of this resolution.

Hal Flood and John W. Price, of Virginia, speaking for their State, declined to ask Ryan to step out, but requested Bryan to withdraw the second part of his resolution. Mr. Bryan said he would give New York an opportunity, yielded the floor to the opposition, and said he would reserve what time he had left to conclude the debate. The debate was on for some time, and then Mr. Bryan concluded with the announcement that he would withdraw the second part of the resolution, that part which demanded "the withdrawal from the convention of any delegate or delegates constituting or representing the above-named interests." And in his concluding statement he said:

"I now withdraw the latter part of the resolution, for I do not intend that any member of this convention shall shield his negative vote against the principal part of the resolution by hiding behind the latter part of it. I intend that the men who think the first part of this resolution is either wrong or unnecessary shall have a chance to say so on roll call."

Resolution Again Read.

Once more, to avoid any uncertainty, Spellacy, of Connecticut, asked that the resolution be read in the shape Mr. Bryan wanted it to go before the convention. Senator James ordered it read, and it was read by the secretary of the convention. In reading it the secretary read the first part and left off there. Thus it will be seen that the original resolution, consisting of two parts, was read twice by Mr. Bryan himself, and a third reading of the first part was given by the clerk. Three times the convention heard the resolution read from the platform.

In a speech delivered at Elizabethtown, Ky., on March 16, 1914, when he announced himself as a candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, Mr. Beckham said, in speaking of the Bryan resolution:

"I was not in the convention hall when that resolution was introduced and read, and when I came in a wild scene of tumult and disorder existed. After I got to the Kentucky delegation I was told that the resolution demanded the withdrawal from the convention of certain delegates. I was opposed to such summary and irregular method of expelling delegates, even though those delegates were on the opposite side from my side in the issues before the convention. In the midst of the great confusion and noise a poll was taken among the Kentucky delegates, and understanding that to be the effect of the resolution to expel those delegates, I voted against it, and am not ashamed of that vote cast under such conditions."

"Now, as everybody knows who attended the Baltimore convention, the introduction of the Bryan resolution and its consideration was the most dramatic feature of the whole convention. The convention assembled at 8 o'clock that night, and the business before it was the nomination of a candidate for President. Other preliminary business had been got out of the way. The most important work of the convention, the naming of the man to bear the Democratic standard in a national campaign, was about to be accomplished. The galleries were filled to overflowing and nearly every delegate was in his seat."

Where Was Beckham?

Where was Mr. Beckham? Even admitting that he was a trifle tardy, it must be remembered that the debate on the Bryan resolution and the general flurry over it lasted for three hours. Nobody in Baltimore, even though he were a mile from the convention hall, could have failed to know what was going on. If Mr. Beckham presented his resolution all about what was going on. Every newspaper in Baltimore had an extra on the streets within fifteen minutes after the resolution was first read.

In every hotel, cigar store, theater, cafe, drug store and saloon in the city there was being read the resolution. Men were grouped around the telephones getting direct from the convention hall reports on the terrific battle that was being waged over the resolution. Men three or four miles away from the hall were reading the text of the resolution, printed in gigantic type on the front page of the extras. The Bryan men were praising the Nebraska for his boldness and courage in making a stand to shake from the skirts of the candidate yet to be named the stain of Wall Street support. The anti-Bryan men were leveling the great Commoner of trying to wreck the party.

And where was Mr. Beckham during all this time? Was he outside the city limits of Baltimore, where he could not hear the tumult that rocked the entire city nor learn its cause? And why was it that, when he finally entered the convention hall, he could not get clear and accurate information on a situation that any delegate in the hall who had ears was not possessed of at least ten minutes before the roll call on the resolution began?

Who Advised Him.

Whom did Mr. Beckham ask for guidance, for information as to what was being voted on? What member of the Kentucky delegation was it who misled Mr. Beckham? So far Mr. Beckham has not named the man who told him that the convention was voting on the proposition to expel delegates.

And why was Mr. Beckham absent from the session of the convention at which the nomination was to be made? It was known that on that evening the names of every man who aspired to be the nominee of the party would be brought forward and that the balloting would begin.

Mr. Beckham says he was "confused." The United States Senate is a body in which a man who becomes "confused" on a big question has no place. Suppose, just suppose, that Mr. Beckham should go to the Senate. And suppose an important question were being voted on and the vote were close. And suppose Mr. Beckham should again be absent from the scene at a crucial hour. And suppose he should rush into the Senate chamber, when the Democrats were voting "aye" and the Republicans were voting "no." And suppose the first man he met and asked how he should vote were Reed Smoot, of Utah, or Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and one of these should tell him to vote "no." And suppose Beckham, in his "confusion" should vote "no."

Would a vote of that sort harm him with the Wall Street interests or with the Knights of the Shackle? Would it harm him more than his vote against the Bryan resolution at Baltimore harmed him with the men of that stripe throughout the country?

On account of the scarcity due to the drouth the price of vegetables is soaring. Home-grown stuff is very scarce and daily the supply is getting smaller. Nearly all the vegetables that have been in market have been brought in from the South. Tomatoes are beginning to ripen, but they are very indifferent. The potato crop is almost a failure. Many gardeners are planting the second crop. The failure of the vegetable crop is working a great hardship on those who are largely dependent on their gardens for their summer supply of food.

BECKHAM OF KENTUCKY

Personal Characteristics and Remarkable Career of the Most Popular Man in Kentucky—The Candidate Most Likely To Succeed the Late Senator Bradley As the Choice of the Democrats At the Primaries To Be Held August 1st

(C. P. Connolly, Staff writer Harper's Weekly.)

J. C. W. Beckham, of Kentucky, the man of the hour in this crucial year in Kentucky Politics.

This remarkable sketch concerning J. C. W. Beckham is reprinted from Harper's Weekly, the national weekly publication that is supporting President Woodrow Wilson and his policies in the present administration at Washington.

THE candidate most likely to succeed the late Senator Bradley as the choice of the Democrats at the primaries to be held August 1st, is J. C. W. Beckham. Beckham was the choice of the Democratic party six years ago, when a Democratic legislature elected the late William O'Connell Bradley, a Republican. There was a majority of eight Democrats in the legislature, but the Whiskey Ring controlled enough of these to defeat Beckham, and Bradley was elected.

Kentucky is replete with romance and tragedy, political and other. If there is anything native about literature, it may account for the professional success of James Lane Allen and of John Fox, Jr., who have both largely drawn on Kentucky for their material.

In business adventure there was James B. Haggin, the mining magnate, who, peeved because of his failure of election to some petty office when a young man, emigrated to California, became fabulously rich, and returning in his old age to his old home at Lexington, established a great stock farm which is one of the show places of Kentucky.

At Frankfort, thirty miles from Lexington, Henry Clay appeared as the attorney for Aaron Burr in his first trial for treason, much to Clay's subsequent chagrin. Here, too, at Lebanon, lived Proctor Knott, one-time governor of Kentucky, who delivered in Congress his famous parody on Duluth. Mountaineers and valley men have their feuds and wars, but at bottom there was usually some elemental instinct of justice. At Frankfort, the capital, in 1900, William Goebel was shot from ambush as he was about to be declared the duly elected governor of the state. Out of this last drama issued the career of J. C. W. Beckham, a mere stripling at the time just past the age of eligibility for the governorship.

The assassination of Goebel was the climax of a great political contest. Not in modern American history anywhere was there a more heroic or tragic struggle. That it left its sting is evidenced by the fact that it is difficult to wean a Kentuckian from his distaste of the subject.

Every one will remember how Goebel fought so valiantly against the politically entrenched Louisville & Nashville Railroad—of how he was sworn in as governor on his death bed, and died with words of pardon for his enemies on his lips.

Goebel, who was the pioneer progressive of the South—he was the pioneer of railroad rate regulation in the country—was the most maligned and misunderstood character in American history. He fought his way bitterly through prejudices strong enough to deter most men, and waged war against the old aristocracy of Kentucky and the Louisville & Nashville railroad ring at the same time.

It was left to Beckham, as the successor of Goebel, to smooth out the wrinkled front of this issue. He followed the even tenor of his way, neither compromising nor bullying, but doing all things with an even-tempered justice which won the people of Kentucky, and reconciled the enemies of Goebel.

Beckham comes of gentle stock. His mother has occupied the Executive Mansion at Frankfort both as daughter and mother of a governor. An uncle, ex-Senator Yulee, of Florida, entered Beckham in the Central University at Richmond, Ky.; but Senator Yulee shortly afterwards dying, young Beckham, then seventeen, was compelled to leave college to look after the farm of his widowed mother. Meanwhile he taught school.

Beckham did not falter in the policies for which Goebel was assassinated. He got through the law advocated by Goebel, allowing the State Railroad Commission to regulate rates. Under his administration Kentucky's new capitol was built. He showed courage in this. Others had recommended a new capitol, but no governor cared to put the power of his administration behind it, because Louisville, on the one side, and Lexington, on the other, both coveted the honor of the capitol.

He collected from the Federal Government an old war debt of $1,300,000. He secured legislation fixing a maximum price for school books. He established two normal schools, and he lengthened the school term in the country districts from five to six months.

But it was in a bitter struggle for the supremacy of the law that Beckham ran against Judge Ben Lindsey's "Beast." He believes that the law should keep pace with the growth of public sentiment, and that when enacted it should be enforced.

The South, topographically the most beautiful section of the country, has had its hurts and its heart-aches, which it has borne without sentimental appeal, and with heroic soul. Its people are grappling with everything that stands in the present way of its welfare. One of these evils is the liquor traffic, which has been peculiarly wretched and sinister in its effects on the South.

If you travel through certain portions of the South, you will rarely pick up a local paper which does not descend on some tragedy that can be traced, directly or remotely, to strong drink. So the anti-liquor crusade is sweeping over the South. Yet it was not in any spirit of crusading that Beckham locked horns with the liquor interests of Kentucky. It was rather the thing that fell in his way as a public duty.

The constitution of Kentucky, adopted some twenty-five years ago, contained a provision that required the legislature to enact a law giving each county of the state the right to vote itself "wet" or "dry." This constitutional provision, like the one that prohibits railroad passes, was honored in the breach. Indeed, Kentucky legislators have been prone, in matters of reform, to adopt the policy of the Vermont Fathers, who resolved "that the laws of God and Connecticut be adopted until we have time to frame better."

Beckham obeyed the Constitution and recommended the enactment of a law in conformity with it; but the liquor interests succeeded in having exempted the larger cities.

Then there was a Sunday closing law on the statute books, which was openly violated in the cities, notably in Louisville. Beckham was appealed to, but he had no power to remove delinquent city officials, and could make only a moral appeal to the mayor of Louisville to enforce the law, which was unsuccessful.

It so happened that shortly after this the Kentucky Court of Appeals decided that the election of all of Louisville's officials had been procured by fraud. The offices were by the court declared vacant, and the governor was empowered to fill them by appointment. Beckham went over the heads of the party machine and appointed a mayor with the understanding that the Sunday closing law would be enforced. It was enforced and is enforced to-day.

The "rectifiers" of Kentucky make a product that is sold as whiskey, but which is made up of various occult ingredients. They were doing an immense business in Kentucky, and paying very little in taxes. Beckham secured a law that taxed these "rectifiers" a cent and a quarter a gallon on their product. Also, he secured the passage of a law prohibiting the shipping of liquor into "dry" territory; but the Supreme Court of the United States held that this was unconstitutional, so far as it affected interstate shipments. The Louisville man, therefore, could take his whiskey across the river to Jeffersonville, Ind., and from there ship it to any point in Kentucky, wet or dry. The Webb law, later passed by Congress, is intended to remove these illicit accommodations and stop the traffic.

Beckham hardly had time to formulate his policies, after Goebel's death, when he was obliged to stand for another election. The politicians were against him, but the people were with him, and he received the votes of 700 out of the 900 delegates.

It was in the palmy days of Maria Hanna, and that astute leader, under whose auspices Kentucky had gone Republican in 1896, believed Beckham could be beaten. The Republicans, therefore, put up their best man and their stoutest purse, but Beckham won nearly 4,000 votes. Three years later there was no opposition to his nomination, and he carried the State by 27,000 plurality.

Towards the end of his second term as governor, Beckham, in 1906, became a candidate for the United States Senate. His candidacy aroused intense feeling in the camp of the liquor interests. In the primary election for the senatorship, in 1907, with the combined opposition of the party machine and the daily newspapers in Louisville, Lexington, Covington and Newport, the four largest cities in the State, Beckham carried 91 counties out of 119 in the State, with the liquor interests furnishing a plethoric purse toward his defeat. Beaten at the polls, the liquor interests retreated to the legislature, and four Democratic legislators voted at the beck of the whiskey ring for a Republican.

By agreeing to abandon the temperance cause for which he had stood, Beckham could have won; but he refused to trade—once more showing his courage and his devotion to principle.

In my opinion, gained after a journey last summer through Kentucky, that sacrifice of Beckham for a principle will make him the next United States senator from Kentucky as surely as it defeated him then. If there is anything in political justice, if there is any atonement for political wrongs, if a people are not ungrateful or indifferent, Beckham will be rewarded. Not that he looks for reward. "Victory is not always the true test of an honest and righteous cause," he said in a public speech after his defeat in 1908; "success may have its pleasures, but failure may have its honor."

And let me add that, whether you believe in prohibition, or in the enforcement of the law, or whether you side with the liquor interests in Kentucky, the whiskey ring of that state has exercised more political power of late years in the state than all other corporations put together; and it is far more violent and autocratic.

If he should go to the senate, he will add to the dignity and the worth of that body. He is one whom the country at large will welcome to the councils of the nation. No man in Kentucky is hardy enough to question his integrity. The charge has been made that, since his return to the practice of law, his law firm has acted as local attorneys for the Louisville & Nashville railroad. Whoever his client, he is of that type of lawyer whose convictions are not for sale with his services. His popularity is based largely upon his integrity, and he is the most popular man in Kentucky.

To Vote By Mail.

Next November citizens of Nebraska who are not at home on election day are to be permitted to cast their ballots by mail. It will be an experiment, and should it prove successful, the new idea may extend to other states. It is claimed that we have poor government because the so-called "best citizens" will not take the trouble to vote. Many thousands cannot well neglect business to go to polls where they are sometimes compelled to submit to indignities. Perhaps if voting by mail proves to be a success in Nebraska every one, whether at home or abroad, will be allowed to cast his or her ballot by mail. This would require an extension of the election period so that votes would have to be sent in during a period of five or ten days, all to be opened upon a certain day. Of course, the ballots would have to be attested by notaries or some other official authorized to administer oaths. This would give business men no excuse to keep from voting and would bring out the full vote. If it would bring about better conditions, by all means let the country have it.

Kitchen Kinks.

Gum camphor sprinkled around the haunts of ants will drive them away.

Put saucepan of boiling water in oven, when baking rolls. Steam will make crust smooth and tender.

When oven is too hot at first, a crust will form over the cake and prevent its raising. It is best to have the oven a little slow at first, then increase the heat after ten minutes.

Baking powder biscuits should be baked in a very quick oven, as hot as possible without burning the biscuits. One that will brown a piece of white paper in one minute is none too hot.

Teacups, no matter how carefully they are washed and dried, sometimes get dark stains at the bottom. These are caused by the action of the tannin in the tea. Salt, slightly moistened, will remove these stains, but in the case of very fine china it is wiser to use powdered whitening instead, as salt might scratch the china.

I keep on hand a full stock of coffins, caskets, and robes. I also keep Metallic Caskets, and Steel Boxes and two hearses. Prompt service night or day. Residence Phone 29, office Phone 98. Ad.

FOR THE CHILDREN

For a Washington Party. There are so many lovely things to use as decorations and souvenirs that it is a pleasure to give a Washington birthday party. Games for the occasion are numerous. The "historical game" is lots of fun. Arrange some of vance by pictures or articles some of the Revolutionary events. For instance, a few carpet tacks on a package of tea would represent "tax on tea."

A tea table arranged with cups of tea and a sign, "This Tea Came From Boston," would stand for "the Boston tea party."

A card bearing a picture of a soldier's bunk, a letter "R" and "H" lying in bed ill would stand for Bunker Hill.

Your imagination can help you work out many events of the Revolutionary times, and for the one guessing the most correct answers you give a toy cherry tree box filled with candy.

Another good game is to give in order the dates of the battles fought in Washington's time. The prize for the best answers can be a toy hatchet. At the table make each sing a patriotic song, awarding a flag as souvenir to the best singer.

Candy cherries hidden about the room create lots of fun. The object is to hunt for them and gather them in. The one who finds the most wins a prize.

Washington's Maxims.

Here are a few rules which were lived up to by George Washington: "Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."

"A good character is the first essential in man."

"Speak not ill of the absent. It is unjust."

"To persevere is one's duty, and to be silent is the best answer to calumny."

"Commerce and industry are best mines of a nation."

"Associate with men of good quality if you esteem your own reputation."

"It is better to be alone than in bad company."

"I never wish to promise more than I have a moral certainty of performing."

Washington's Accuracy.

All schoolboys know something of Washington's adventures as a surveyor when he measured the great estates of Lord Fairfax, but perhaps few are aware of the painstaking accuracy with which he did his work. Many years afterward it was found that the surveys made by Washington when a youth were the only land measurements of that part of the country in colonial days that could be depended upon. Even after his death Washington's surveys passed unquestioned among lawyers.

Washington's Birthday.

Washington's birth is recorded in the family Bible as having taken place on "the 11th day of February, 1732." This was before the adoption of the modern calendar by England, and this day was observed by Washington as his birthday until his twentieth year. The first known public celebration of Washington's birthday was on Feb. 11, 1784. The old style date was still adhered to. This was during the lifetime of the first president and completed his fifty-second year.

Mother Carey's Chickens.

Above is the name given by sailors to the stormy petrel, a small sea bird, the appearance of which is an unfailing sign of rough weather.

The expression Mother Carey is said to be a corruption of mater cara, dear mother, a phrase used by Italian sailors in speaking of the mother of Christ, patroness of seafaring men, to indicate their thankfulness to her for sending these, her chickens, to warn them of bad weather.

Washington's Youth.

Washington's proudest youthful possessions were a pony and a whip top. He was taught to ride the pony by Uncle Ben, one of his father's slaves, and on this humble animal he acquired that seat on the saddle that carried him through the dangers of two wars. The whip top probably was a toy imported from England. Even in the mother country toys were few and crude in those days.

A Boy's Witty Remark.

A teacher said to a boy considered dull in mathematics: "You should be ashamed of yourself. Why, at your age George Washington was a surveyor."

"Yes, sir," was the response, "and at your age he was president of the United States."

The Oldest Flower.

The rose is the oldest flower of which there is any record. So great is the antiquity of the rose that all account of its origin has been lost. In Egypt the rose is depicted on a number of monuments believed to date from 3,000 to 3,500 B. C.

A Permanent Cure For Chronic Constipation

Although those may dispute it who have not tried it, yet thousands of others, who speak from personal experience, assert that there is a permanent cure for chronic constipation. Some testify they were cured for as little as fifty cents, years ago, and that the trouble never came back on them, while others admit they took several bottles before a steady cure was brought about. The remedy referred to is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been on the market for over a quarter of a century and has been popularized on its merits, by one person telling another, are women and elderly people—the ones most persistently constipated—makes it certain that the claims regarding it as a permanent cure for constipation have not been exaggerated.

It is not violent like cathartic pills, salts or waters, but operates gently, without griping and without shock to the system. It contains tonic properties that strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles so that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with and nature is again solely relied on. Among the legions who testify to these facts are J. F. Blankenship, Sharon, Tenn., and Beulah L. Rogers, Kosmosdale, Ky., and they always have a bottle of it in the house, for it is a reliable laxative for all the family from infancy to old age.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

It Always Helps

says Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic. She says further: "Before I began to use Cardui, my back and head would hurt so bad, I thought the pain would kill me. I was hardly able to do any of my housework. After taking three bottles of Cardui, I began to feel like a new woman. I soon gained 35 pounds, and now, I do all my housework, as well as run a big water mill.

I wish every suffering woman would give

Some Egg Items.

Massachusetts each year pays $20,000,000 for eggs and poultry raised outside of the State, in addition to $4,000,000 more for that raised in the State.

A medical authority says the shell of an egg is used as an antacid, being better adapted to the stomach than chalk. The white of an egg is an antidote in cases of poisoning with strong acids or corrosive sublimate. The poison will coagulate the albumen, and if these poisons be in the system, the white of an egg swallowed quickly will combine with the poison and protect the stomach.

At a meeting of pure food advocates in New York, the announcement was made that the only really pure food is the fresh egg. This raised the question whether a man's life might be prolonged indefinitely if he limited his diet to eggs. It was cited that Luigi Cornaro, the famous Italian of some centuries back, who at the age of forty, with his constitution apparently ruined through excess, adopted a regimen that enabled him to live as long as he wanted to live, and died on the threshold of his hundredth year, set great store in eggs. It was this interesting gentleman who reduced his diet by degrees until he sustained himself in serenity and comfort on a single egg a day.

Have you secured a stand of grass or clover on the wheat fields? If not, better disc up and plant to cowpeas or soy beans. They will take the place of clover. Better yet, break up the land and make a good seed bed. In August plant to clover and grass. A stand is almost certain and next year's crop will be a full one. July is also the month to get ready to sow alfalfa.

Millions in Poverty.

The terrible national disasters which have recently visited Japan namely, the famine in the north, reaching over many provinces, and reducing several millions to abject poverty and suffering, and the destructive volcanic eruptions and earthquakes in Kagoshima, are enough to cause the people more serious thoughts, regarding not only the source of their material blessings, but also of their spiritual welfare.

The conditions are calling for the only message which can give relief and bring a wandering people back to God. Our needs are more earnest prayer for your representatives and those among whom they labor; reinforcement, at least to maintain, and if possible, to increase the working force and equipment of our mission to meet the present and increasing demands of the work.

Egg Farming.

The egg farmer must be honest.

Upon his honesty depends his success.

Buyers of eggs must have faith, and this faith must not be shaken.

One bad egg in the lot will not only be the loss of faith, but the loss of a valuable customer.

Eggs should be marketed at least once a week. Twice a week would be far better.

The honest egg farmer is not afraid to date his eggs.

The man with the reputation of selling only strictly fresh eggs has no trouble to find customers. They come after him.

The wise egg farmer grades his eggs according to color and size, and he gets a little more for his trouble.

The man who by means of a pickle or some preservative, puts away his summer eggs to sell in winter at advanced prices, is dishonest, and his customers quickly detect his trick.

Food flavors the egg, and the wise poulterer knowing this feeds nothing but the purest of grains, merts and vegetables. Nothing is allowed the hens that will taint the flavor.

"Guaranteed eggs" are those laid by fowls judiciously fed on the purest of food, kept in the cleanest of houses, and always put on the market in a fresh condition.

"Store eggs" are a lottery. You may get a prize, but it is more likely that you will draw blanks.

The farmer, otherwise, honest is often tempted to put the contents of a "hidden nest" in the fresh egg basket—and his religious views are doubted.

NIGH UNTO DEATH

By ALVA R. HUNTINGTON

It was at a time when the trans-mississippi country was developing, and instead of the iron horse, with its train dashing along at the rate of fifty miles an hour, the stagecoach lumbered at the rate of five or six. One of these coaches left Denver one morning, struck the mountains at Golden City, mounted to the highest point and moved on downward and upward alternately toward Georgetown.

On the top of the coach a gentleman and his family were enjoying the scenery. The driver sat on his box trying to keep awake, for he had been drinking, while beside him sat a young man whose costume denoted that he was a resident of the region. The coach reached the top of an ascent, and the road in front wound downward in one of those frequent dips in the mountains. It had begun the descent, and the young man sitting beside the driver, noticing that he had failed to put on the brake, looked aside at him to see what it meant. The fellow was asleep and had not only failed to "brake," but had let go his hold on the reins, which were now down on the pole.

A punch in the ribs awoke the driver, who, seeing the reins dangling from the pole and the coach rolling rapidly down the crooked road, jumped from his seat, preferring rather to be injured by a fall on the stony road than to be hurled over a precipice he knew to be at a turn farther down.

There were shrieks from the women passengers, while the men were paralyzed. But among the latter there was one exception. The young man left alone on the box let himself down on the pole, gathered up the reins, climbed back on to the box and put on the brake. The horses were by this time so wild and the speed so great that it was very difficult to control the one and lessen the other. Not an eighth of a mile distant was the turn in the road, with a gulf a thousand feet deep on one side. The cries and shrieks had ceased with the effort thus far made to regain control, and every eye was fixed on the danger ahead, every breath held in terror.

The man on the box kept a firm hand on the reins and pushed with all his strength with his right foot on the brake. There was a lessening of the speed, but would it be reduced sufficiently to go safely round the curve? The hearts of those whose lives were at stake were throbbing in time with the jumping of the horses. When the turn was reached the velocity was still so great that there was little hope. The women recommenced to shriek.

"Stop that," said the driver. "You'll excite the horses!" The cries ceased. There was no sound except what came from the horses' hoofs and the creaking of the coach, while every one held with a tight grip to his seat and looked with straining eyes at the gulf before him. The driver guided the horses as near the rock on the inner side as he dared, for should he hit it the coach would be knocked over the precipice. Notwithstanding his effort so great was its swing when it made the turn that a hind wheel slid over a slope a few feet from the edge. The driver gave a yell to the horses and threw the long lash of his whip among them with a crack. Every animal gave a jump, the wheel came back on level ground, and the rest of the turn was made in safety.

The final effort caused the horses to break forth again, and again they must be brought under control. But now the road was comparatively straight and soon the lamination began to lessen. In a few minutes the bottom of the dip was reached, and the coach was brought to a standstill. Then the driver was in folded in the arms of those on the outside of the coach, both men and women.

An hour later the coach drove up to the hotel at Idaho Springs and all alighted. The gentleman who was traveling with his wife and family took the driver aside for a private interview.

"You have saved the lives of a coach load of persons," he said, "including myself, my wife and family. Had it not been for your coolness and courage we would all have met with a frightful death. What can I do for you? I'm rich and my fortune is at your disposal."

"You owe me nothing, sir," said the young man, with a British accent. "My own life was in jeopardy. In saving myself I saved the others."

"You could have left the coach as the cowardly driver did."

To this the young man made no reply. "Come," resumed the gentleman; "anything you ask that is in my power to grant shall be granted."

The young man hesitated, then said: "I don't belong here; I came from England. You know the younger sons in England must shift for themselves. I came to this country, where I am not known, and can turn my hand to anything. Being fond of horses, I drove a stage. I have left that and am going up to Georgetown to start on a prospecting tour."

But the young man's plans were changed. He went to the east, entered the banking house of a man whose life he saved and is now wealthy. He says that he went just near enough to the edge of a precipice to grasp a fortune without going over.

GENERAL BENNETT H. YOUNG ANNOUNCES HIS PLATFORM

Distinguished Candidate For the Short Term
Senatorship Gives Reasons For Nomination—Asks For Recognition

GENERAL BENNETT H. YOUNG

PLATFORM AND ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Democratic Voters of Kentucky:

I am a candidate on the Democratic ticket in the primary for the Short Term in the United States Senate. This service will last only ninety days.

I ask the votes of my party because I have served it with unflinching loyalty for more than forty years. In every city, state and national campaign since 1872, without compensation, or even the payment of traveling expenses, I have gone when and where the party authorities asked, and defended Democratic principles and advocated the election of its standard bearers.

In the contest between Governor Beckham and John W. Yerkes, at Mt. Sterling, I assisted in opening the campaign. One hundred thousand copies of my speech were distributed amongst the people. In the contest between Judge Hager and Wilson I rendered all possible aid to the Democratic standard bearer.

I was one of Governor Goebel's counsel in his contest before the Election Commission, and also before the Legislature. I became Governor Beckham's adviser when he took the office, and he declared no man ever had better counsel. At his request I induced General John B. Castleman to become Adjutant General, and General Castleman's services did much to save civil war and widespread bloodshed in Kentucky. When the members of the Legislature, after the assassination of Wm. Goebel, were driven from Frankfort and their warrants for pay were refused, in order to hold them together until they could return to the capital I arranged, through my own bank, to advance the pay of all who needed or desired it until such time as warrants could be secured. This amounted to many thousands of dollars.

I was a member of the Constitutional Convention and stood for the rights of the people in every contest in that body. As Chairman of the Committee on Municipality I fathered the enactment that limits all grants of franchises to 20 years and required their sale for the benefit of the public and not for political favorites or grafters. This has already put hundreds of thousands of dollars in the city and county treasury, and will when old grants expired, add many millions more. I was the principal advocate of the clauses preventing railway discrimination and the acquisition of competing lines by railroads. The value of these provisions can not be estimated in money.

This is my first and it will be my only request for office, and after forty years of labor and service to my party I ask the honor of representing in the United States Senate the state of Kentucky, for which my forefathers fought the red men, the state in which I was born, I have lived, and always served as best I could. I pray Kentucky may always be right, but I shall always be for Kentucky, right or wrong.

BENNETT H. YOUNG.

Louisville, Ky.—(Special).—In response to the expressed wishes of many hundred voters throughout the state, General Bennett H. Young today made public the platform upon which he rests his candidacy for the Short Term in the United States Senate, to cover the ninety days, running from November 15th, 1914, to March 1st, 1915. General Young has for more than forty-two years been identified with the Democratic party in Kentucky. Returning after the war, in 1868, and settling in Louisville, Ky., he took up the practice of law, where he quickly took front rank among the foremost members of the bar. From that day to the present time he has been a consistent, earnest worker for Democratic success, and never failed to help in any campaign by contribution or speeches.

Service in Constitutional Convention. His first public service, and the only elective office that he has ever held, was as a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1890.

As Chairman of the Municipal Committee he was largely instrumental in framing the Constitution which has done so much to protect the people of Kentucky. After the Constitutional Convention he became one of the leaders in explaining and advocating the adoption of the new Constitution by the people of Kentucky, who responded with an unprecedented majority in favor of the new instrument. At the time it was viciously attacked, especially by the corporations. Previous to the Constitution of 1890 franchises for city railways and other public utilities were farmed out to those favorites who might be able to secure them by use of influence or in other ways much less reputable. Under this Constitution all such franchises must be sold to the highest bidder. Had this plan been adopted fifty years before it would have been worth $100,000,000 to the people of Kentucky. Under the present Constitution they must be sold at public outcry and can last only twenty years.

He was also largely instrumental in securing the provision in the Constitution which prevents a railroad from securing control of competing lines. This has been shown to be a most valuable provision, notable so in the purchase of what is known as the Illinois Central Railroad by the Louisville & Nashville, and so secured competition for all of Southwestern Kentucky. In money it is almost impossible to value the benefit of this provision.

Advisor of Goebel.

There has never been a canvass of any importance in the State of Kentucky for the last forty years in which General Young has not taken part, always paying his own expenses and giving his time without compensation, speaking and organizing. In the dark days of 1899 and 1900 he became one of the counsel of William Goebel in his contest for the office of Governor before the Election Commission and after ward one of his counsel in the contest before the Legislature. He was the last one of his lawyers to confer with him and had arranged a line of argument to be presented on the following day, a few minutes before Goebel was shot down in the grounds of the capitol. After the stricken Governor was carried to the Capital Hotel, at his request General Young went out upon the balcony of the hotel and urged the people in Frankfort to do no act of violence, but to live within the law.

At that time it was feared that the Federal Government would interfere, and when it was certain that Governor Goebel could not live, General Young was urged to come at once to Frankfort, and arrived there from Louisville about the time Goebel died.

General Young wrote the oath that Governor Beckham took upon assuming the place made vacant by the death of Governor Goebel, and at once became his advisor and counsel.

When it was necessary to advise with counsel of W. S. Taylor, who were then in the Capitol Building, with John K. Hendricks, of Paducah, General Young was appointed by the rest of Governor Goebel's counsel to confer with Mr. Taylor's lawyers and took such steps as would prevent conflict. Upon entering the State House he was confronted by soldiers who had their bayoneted guns across the entrance. Being refused admission, they defied these soldiers and entered the State House; and, after a conference with Governor Bradley and associates, such arrangements were made as prevented bloodshed between the contending factions. In connection with Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn, Phil B. Thompson and Judge Thomas Paynter, he remained in Frankfort to look after the interests of Governor Beckham. Many friends urged him to leave the capital, but he simply decided that duty called him there and he remained until the end.

Governor Beckham, in introducing him to an audience on an occasion when General Young was making a speech upon the anniversary of Governor Goebel's death, said that General Young had been his wisest and truest advisor and his best counsel in those trying days.

In the Contest Between Beckham and Yerkes.

When the contest occurred between Governor Beckham and John W. Yerkes, General Young was asked by the State Committee to make one of the opening speeches of the campaign at Mt. Sterling, Ky. The committee published 100,000 copies of this speech for distribution, and it was not only largely circulated, but published either in whole or in part in every Democratic paper in the state, and it was agreed at that time that this speech had a very large influence in aiding Governor Beckham's election.

In introducing General Young some time afterward to Hon. William Jennings Bryan, Senator Blackburn said that this Mt. Sterling speech at the opening of this campaign was, in his judgment, the most effective campaign speech ever made in Kentucky.

Long Service for the Democratic Party.

In every contest General Young has always borne an earnest and active part and has probably made more speeches than any man in Kentucky who has never held office. Beginning with the period when he helped canvass for Governor McCreary, when he was candidate for Governor the first time, in 1878, down to the present time, his labor and his money have been at the command of the party, and he has never hesitated in his loyalty to the principles and organization of the Democratic party.

General Young is an Earnest Supporter of President Woodrow Wilson.

General Young is an earnest supporter of President Woodrow Wilson, and believes that all loyal Democrats should rally to his support in upholding him in his wise and humane policy.

This is the first and only office that General Young has ever asked at the hands of the Democrats of Kentucky, and great numbers of voters have said that in view of his long service to the party, his intellectual attainments and general fitness for this high office, the Democrats of Kentucky could send no better man to the United States Senate.

UNANIMOUSLY ENDORSED

General Young's Home County Wants Him.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted at the speaking of General Bennett H. Young at his opening address for the Short Term of the United States Senate after his speech at Nicholasville, July 4th, 1914:

"The Democrats of Jessamine County, with great satisfaction and pride, commend to the people of Kentucky their fellow-countryman, General Bennett H. Young, for the position of United States Senator for the Short Term. Born in our midst, we have watched his career for many years with general interest. Jessamine County feels honored to be able to offer to the people of Kentucky one so splendidly qualified to fill the high place to which he aspires. A Democrat of Democrats, ever loyal to the party, we are assured that he will meet every expectation of all the people of his native state.

"His forceful and eloquent advocacy of the principles of Democracy for the past forty years should endear him to every voter in Kentucky, and his usefulness as a citizen in developing the state ought to win for him a great victory in the August primary."
